ARMS none

John M'Inrig in Mennochmiln, 1601, denounced to the Privy Council. M'Canrick c. 1740. Also the families of Machendrick, Machendry, Machenry, Mackendrick, Mackenrick: these are Highland border names meaning 'son of Henry,' In Gaelic MacEanruig. The d is intrusive as in Henderson, which has the same meaning and is used as in Englishing of the name. John M'Henri [Henrici], Lord of Koylyan, charter witness, c. 1370-80. Gilcrist Makhenry, tenant of Hilderbrigende and Dumquharagan in 1480 appears again in 1483 as M'Henri. John McKanrig, probably his son, was tenant of Croschambry, Stragartna, in 1499, and appears again as John McCanrig or McCanrik, tenant of Dumquhargane, Strathgartney, in 1502. Eugar Makanry held a merkland of John Culquhone of Luss in Kilmin in 1497, and Gilbert Makcanryk, a follower of the earl of Cassillis, was respited for murder in 1526. Duncan McKinriche was tenant on lands in Strathdee in 1527, and Johnne M'Henry had a remission from Queen Mary for his part in assisting the English in burning the town of Dunnone and besieging the castle in 1546. In 1695 the earl of Argyll was returned heir in a 'mercata terrea ab antique per Iver M'Canrie possessa'. Donald McCandrie and John McCandrie in Glaick and Duncan McHenrie in Knockbaine of Strathbren are in record in 1726. The Henrys of Argyll and Bute are most probably originally Mackendricks. The names are also Englished Henry.
